

This site uses cookies. By continuing to browse the site you are agreeing to our use of cookies. Review our Privacy and Cookie Notice for more details.

ENR
Engineering News-Record

REGISTER HERE

REGIONAL BEST 2014 PROJECTS

subscribe |
 free e-newsletter |
 product info |
 advertise |
 FAQ |
 Architectural Record Subscriber Login »

ARCHITECTURAL RECORD

SUBSCRIBE TODAY
for premium web access

Search our site:

NEWS |
 PROJECTS |
 RESIDENTIAL |
 FEATURES |
 CRITIQUE |
 BOOKS |
 VANGUARD |
 VIDEO |
 PRACTICE |
 TECHNOLOGY |
 PRODUCTS |
 COMMUNITY |
 GREEN

DAILY NEWS |
 HURRICANE SANDY |
 NEWSMAKER INTERVIEWS |
 ARCHITECTURAL ANALYTICS

share: Twitter | Facebook | LinkedIn | YouTube | iStock | Pinterest | + more » |
 print |
 email |
 comment |
 recommend \(7\)

NEWS:

Center for Civil and Human Rights Opens Its Doors to Atlanta

By Gray Chapman

July 28, 2014

Photo © Albert Vecerka/Esto
Designed for LEED Gold certification, the Center is set into a hillside facing Atlanta's Pemberton Place, a pedestrian park. SLIDE SHOW

Five decades ago, the powerful sermons of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. reverberated inside the halls of Ebenezer Baptist Church, inspiring a generation of civil rights activists who shared his dreams of equality. This summer, less than 2 miles from the neighborhood where Dr. King made history, the civil rights movement is experiencing a rebirth with the opening of the long-awaited National Center for Civil and Human Rights. The 43,000-square-foot Center, designed by The Freelon Group and HOK, opened to the public on June 23 with three exhibitions connecting the legacy of the American civil rights movement to the modern-day fight for human rights around the world. In addition to the Center's galleries, the building also houses conference rooms and special-event space.

SLIDE SHOW

The Freelon Group, led by founder Phil Freelon, was selected from a pool of top-tier architects after an international design competition. Freelon himself is no stranger to projects rooted in history and culture: the

----- Advertising -----

- DAILY HEADLINES
- » Eight Highlights of the Seattle Design Festival
  - » Zaha Hadid Architects Unveils Design for Trio of Skyscrapers in Brisbane, Australia
  - » Gehry Revises Design for Eisenhower Memorial in DC
  - » Blair Kamin: Chicago's Old Buildings Present Challenges
  - » Norman Foster, Fernando Romero Design Selected for $9.2B Mexico Airport

Photo © Mark Herboth
A monumental stair connects the three levels.

architect has worked on buildings such as the Smithsonian National Museum of African American History and Culture in Washington, D.C. (currently under construction), and the Museum of the African Diaspora in San Francisco. "I established my firm based on several tenets and ideals, and one of them was that we were about knowledge-sharing, education, and creating environments that enhance the communities in which they're built," says Freelon. (The Freelon Group merged with Perkins+Will this spring.)

The project has encountered challenges along the way, mostly because the financial collapse hit at the height of fundraising efforts, around 2008. Ultimately, Freelon's original design, a scheme inspired by interlocking arms, had to be shaved down to about half its size, but Freelon doesn't find the final product any less meaningful. In fact, he says, "it was really a process of focusing and distilling the idea into something even more powerful." Despite the roadblocks, Freelon and his team produced a design conducive to the Center's mission: to provide a visitor experience that uplifts and inspires while lending gravity to serious and often violent stories.

That experience begins when one first catches a glimpse of the three-story building from across the site's lawn. The Center's angled exterior facade, composed of a mosaic of earth-toned phenolic-resin panels, frames a glass curtain wall through which the lobby's vibrant mural (a montage of human-rights posters) can be seen. Situated on the north end of Pemberton Place, a 20-acre tourism hub that's also home to World of Coca-Cola and the Georgia Aquarium, the building's curvilinear form is immediately distinctive. "It's exuberant, but also dignified," says Freelon.

Inside, that distinctive shape is echoed by a gently bending path guiding visitors through the exhibitions. The anchor exhibition on the lower level contains a rotating display of papers and artifacts from the Morehouse College Martin Luther King, Jr. Collection. The struggles and triumphs of the American civil rights movement are presented in often dark detail in another exhibition (designed by the Rockwell Group), where visitors meander through dark, dramatically lit corridors to explore the defining moments of the movement. Here visitors can relive the harassment endured by the Greensboro lunch-counter sit-in protestors, in 1960, via headsets, and experience the moment when Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination hit the news on April 4, 1968. "There's this narrative power that builds and builds," says David Mandel, director of exhibitions and design. "But at the end, in one of the darkest moments, with the funeral of Dr. King, you ascend."

A monumental stair leads visitors from the lower level to the lobby and then to a bright balcony level, where a wall details all of the reform legislation. At the top-floor gallery, where visitors arrive after the culmination of the civil rights exhibition, the struggle for equality is given contemporary context by a setting reminiscent of a modern art gallery. This space, Freelon says, is where the form of the building is expressed on the interior. An exposed ceiling, brushed-concrete columns, and angled walls lend a sense of gravity to the stories being told. "These issues are overbearing, they're repressive, they're literally leaning in on you," says Freelon.

From the outset, those behind the Center—who included civil rights luminaries Andrew Young and Evelyn Lowery, along with former Atlanta mayor Shirley Franklin—wanted this to be a place that paid homage to history while looking forward. "We want this to be a magnet, drawing in the thinkers and the doers and the activists—sparking the kind of dialogue that makes a longstanding difference in our world culture," Freelon says. If that becomes the case, the Center will truly transform its touristy environs.

Keywords: National Center for Civil and Human Rights; Atlanta; Phil Freelon; The Freelon Group; HOK

 Subscribe to *Architectural Record
Get Architectural Record digital with free bonus content not found in the magazine!
Order back issues—complete your library!

 Reader Comments:

View all daily headlines »

----- Advertising -----

Free White Papers

ENR White Papers – Turnkey Lead Generation:

ADD WHITE PAPERS

 Sweets UPDATED DAILY

SEARCH BUILDING PRODUCTS

FOLLOW @ARCHRECORD

ARCHITECTURAL ANALYTICS

The Dodge Index for Retail Construction 6/2013 – 6/2014

Architectural Analytics: Our monthly market forecast and the Dodge Momentum Index

READER FEEDBACK

Most Commented

Most Recommended

Lawsuit Suggests New Liability for Architects...

Martin Filler Responds to Zaha Hadid's Lawsui...

Taliesin Troubles - News - Architectural Reco...

Longest Sunken-Tube Tunnel Planned | ENR: Eng...

Obdurate by Design - Architectural Record

Designers Can Make the Case for Renewables an...

Rankings reflect comments made in the past 14 days

ARCHITECTURAL RECORD SUBSCRIPTIONS

» Subscribe to *Architectural Record*

» Subscribe to *Architectural Record* Digital

» Manage Print Subscription

» Order Additional Copies and Back Issues

Sign in to Comment

To write a comment about this story, please sign in. If this is your first time commenting on this site, you will be required to fill out a brief registration form. Your public username will be the beginning of the email address that you enter into the form (everything before the @ symbol). Other than that, none of the information that you enter will be publically displayed.

gstahlarch wrote:

Although a building can never be judged from a few pretty photo's, without accompanying plans, the idealistic intentions and descriptions of the buildings functions do not conceal the mental and intellectual poverty of those responsible for the totally outdated imagery of the "fibrant mural". An insult to the African Aerican community and above all the African American visual artists. The entrance lobby does not give the slightest hint of what is shown in the building. Interesting to know who is to blame for this mesalliance, the architect or the board?

G.S.

7/30/2014 10:34 PM CDT

Recommend Report Abuse Permalink

parix wrote:

Is this the best HOK can do ?

7/30/2014 4:10 PM CDT

Recommend \(3\) Report Abuse Permalink

You must be logged in to leave a comment. Login | Register

POWERED BY Pluck

We welcome comments from all points of view. Off-topic or abusive comments, however, will be removed at the editors' discretion.

resources | editorial calendar | submit work | contact us | about us | call for entries | site map | back issues | advertise | terms of use | privacy and cookie notice | my account

© 46657 McGraw Hill Financial. All Rights Reserved